Provost Ponderings

Each day when I enter the campus I reflect upon how these are, indeed, exciting times for Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi. This spirit is embodied in our Mission Statement. This living and breathing document is a testament to how we approach higher education for South Texas and create the path we take in our daily work.

Our many constituents have stepped forward in helping us reshape parts of the Mission Statement. We’ve learned much from faculty, staff and students over these past months. We are capturing in this guiding document our essence—the history, traditions and character that have led the spreading roots of this great university. We have vision and aspirations that we will hold in these bold words.

Central to the Mission Statement are objectives that take into consideration our operating principles. These objectives, to be sure, are cast around the 4Es.
