ROTC Islander Battalion

The Army ROTC Islander Battalion forms the College of Education’s Department of Military Science. The Army ROTC department provides students with leadership, team building, and management training. It also provides adventurous experiences through a weekly lab and promotes a healthy lifestyle through its physical fitness program.

Courses in Military Science provide ROTC students the tools, training, and experience necessary to become officers in the US Army. Students can be commissioned as second lieutenants upon their graduation and successful completion of ROTC requirements. Students simultaneously pursue a degree of their choice.
