The English Department at Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi welcomes you! The Department offers strong programs and diverse course offerings in linguistics, literature, and rhetoric and composition. The English faculty have a broad range of expertise, covering both traditional fields such as British and American literature as well as technical and creative writing, and more recent developments in the profession such as women’s and ethnic literatures, community literacy and service learning, and ethnography. We offer teacher certification programs (grades 4-8 and 8-12), as well as minors in Technical and Professional Writing and in Creative Writing. Faculty have a strong commitment to undergraduate education, and a dedicated faculty member with expertise in your career track will advise and mentor you throughout your undergraduate career.

Please take some time to browse our pages and learn more about the Department's faculty, English programs, course and course rotation, degree plans, advising, and future career opportunities. Don’t forget to read our semi-annual newsletter.

Other features of the Department include

- the annual Haas Writing Awards;
- the English Honor Society, Sigma Tau Delta
- Open Mic events for students and University Authors' Day with readings by nationally acclaimed authors;
- the student publication The Windward Review;
- the graduate student organization SAGES;
- workshops on career opportunities, and much more.